

How to use this site

This site heaves with ideas and information. Have a look at this page to get a better idea of how the site is organised.

We're always weaving someplace between the marginal spaces...providing too much detail or too little, trying to classify things with many descriptions or forgetting to classify them at all, or chasing related connections ten links deep while the most important concepts are left unsupported...it's a constant learning process.

Anyway, here's a quick peek into our brainspace when this site was organised so you get a general idea at least: Newsroom

Provides a feed of media clippings related to the themes we're covering. We find these clippings from anywhere and everywhere, so it's sort of like a news aggregation service. Should be available to you as an RSS feed.

Also expect to find a collection of conversation points here: blogs etc. [go to Newsroom]Project Notes

The Greening India Festival is sort of omnibus collection point for just about any project we're associated with. So under this section you can expect to find headings for each of the well-formed "projects" that we are juggling.

Within each project heading, expect to find news, contacts, and descriptions associated with that project. [go to PROJECT NOTES] Resources

This is a groomed collection of stuff you can get your hands and minds onto. Films, videos, books, etc. that we especially like are all collected up here. The occasional database or online resource might also find its way onto the list. [go to Resources] About us / Contact / Search

Straightforward [go to About Us] [Models of Awareness]

This is a running list of organisations and initiatives that we're particularly enchanted by. The list is our contribution to their viral promotion. [Themes]

This is another cut at the onion. Here you'll see a list of themes, which are really just channels of coherence we're drawing attention to by collecting a bunch of interrelated ideas under some headings. These themes will carry on across the Festival and create an armature of integrative ideas like glowing tracers in the darkness arcing around the form of an as yet unknowable wholeness. [Conference details]

And of course if you're really interested in what's on, who's talking, and how you can join the party, try this heading and good luck to you!